Dear Power Sector Family Members,

I knew long back that a day would come when I will have to bid farewell to my office and wonderful colleagues, who stood by my side for years and have become more of an extended family to me. Personally speaking, I am not a big fan of the word "farewell" because to me, life is a journey, and you have to keep moving. What changes in reality are just the milestones.

I am so proud of what we built together in past many years and how much I had enjoyed working with each one of you.

Surely, we had our share of good and bad days, emotions and thrills, suspense and arguments but no good recipe can be made without a mix of spices. That is how I describe my time with all of you. A time, which I can proudly say was no less than a celebrated chef's recipe.

Your contributions were noteworthy and there were many moments of pride that I experienced working with each one of you. I am going to save them in my heart's hard-disk for-ever and cherish the memories for years to come.

While I will transition to the next phase of my life, I will surely miss the spontaneity of the work and generosity of such brilliant colleagues.

Let me end by quoting a famous American poet and writer, Maya Angelou, who said –

"People will forget what you said, they will also forget what you did but people will never forget how you made them feel!!".

If you remember this every day, you will always be a winner.

Thank you again. And best of luck!"

With cherishable memories.

Sandesh
